Please note:

A UKCA Type Examination certificate is based on testing of a model of the product and in itself does not represent any assessment of bulk production.

The manufacturer remains responsible for ensuring conformity of the PPE produced with the design specifications. Information relating to quality control activities is required to be included within the technical documentation held by the manufacturer, but any such information submitted to SATRA will not have been assessed as part of the UKCA type examination.

Yours sincerely,

Shannon Clare
